A corridor of sandy terrain known as the Ad-Dahna desert connects the large An-Nafud desert (65,000 km²) in the north of Saudi Arabia to the Rub' Al-Khali in the south-east.

- The Tuwaiq escarpment is a region of 800 km arc of limestone cliffs, plateaux, and canyons.[citation needed]
- Brackish salt flats: the quicksands of Umm al Samim. ✓
- The Wahiba Sands of Oman: an isolated sand sea bordering the east coast[4][5]
- The Rub' Al-Khali[6] desert is a sedimentary basin elongated on a south-west to north-east axis across the Arabian Shelf. At an altitude of 1,000 m, the rock landscapes yield the place to the Rub' al-Khali, vast wide of sand of the Arabian desert, whose extreme southern point crosses the centre of Yemen. The sand overlies gravel or Gypsum Plains and the dunes reach maximum heights of up to 250 m. The sands are predominantly silicates, composed of 80 to 90% of quartz and the remainder feldspar, whose iron oxide-coated grains color the sands in orange, purple, and red.
